SAFETY TIPS THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE

1

Never pull out any weapon (knife, bat or gun [if you've one of these]) unless the situation is dire or you're prepared to kill or die. Weapons always escalate the situation to a dangerous level because when you use a weapon on somebody, there is always a risk of it being used against you. Also, never use pepper spray in a closed space (say a room or in a cab). It will decapitate both you and the perpetrator in the process.

2

Remember if you ever encounter any hostile situation/person, you will only have two options—fight or flight! Many people freeze due to shock when they are under such situations. The outcome will only be the worst. You need to decide in your head what your immediate course of action would be. You either run and get away (possibly the best solution) or you can choose to fight.

3

If you are being attacked, you can defend yourself by hitting them in their groin, eyes or ears. This is where the person is most vulnerable and if you get a good hit, you can stall them long enough for you to get away. Alternatively, if you have no weapon to defend yourself, your belt can be used as a whip.

4

If you're in a hotel room with a door that has a peephole without any cover, place a crumpled paper or tissue in the hole so that nobody can look inside. The one-way peephole technology isn't always fool proof.

5

If you ever get caught in a burning building, always lay low to the ground. The breathable air will be closer to the floor.
